

Managing resources across projects and services

Innate software provides demand, resource and time management capability for those who manage human resources across projects and services.

It is particularly effective where the use of spreadsheets and/or Microsoft Project are not providing a complete or satisfactory solution.

Innate has the look and feel of a traditional spreadsheet through its multi-user web based interface, and superb synchronisation with Microsoft Project.

Better information, more control for less effort

"Innate Resource Manager surpassed my expectations with its ease of use, scalability and an extremely efficient support desk."

Trevor May,
Gist, BOC

- Demand management

The spreadsheet style interface easily captures demand profiles for both project and business as usual work. Project pipeline reports and scenario analysis help to manage the overall demand, by assessing the resource and commercial consequences of alternatives. With the big picture agreed, you can use Microsoft Project or the spreadsheet for more detailed planning.

- Resource management

You can see your skills capacity to take on new work and rebalance the workload as priority or scope changes arise. Staff get assigned to the most important tasks, particularly where collaboration between project and resource managers is important.

- Timesheets and performance measurement

Get staff utilisation analysis and project tracking with simple to use timesheets. You can see costs as they are incurred and measure profitability and performance against plans and budgets. It's very easy to operate, with low overheads and automatic alerts that drive your process.

Better information, more control for less effort

• Business Information

Browser reports give everyone the information that they need - on demand. Highlight skill bottlenecks and spare capacity, and drill down to the detail. Performance reports show project variance and their causes in time for corrective action. Each person stores their preferred layouts and can export directly to Excel for further manipulation.

• Services

Experienced Innate staff provide pre-sales, implementation and long term support. A well proven process keeps implementation simple and quick to minimise project risk and shorten timescales. The help desk provides email and phone support on all software related queries. A comprehensive support website provides bulletins, search facilities for reported issues and software downloads.
